So, Bing has mounted a small float chamber on the "outside" of the carb to supply fuel while going through a curve. During a really long curve, BMW found that the chamber wasn't large enough and it would finally use up the fuel and starve out. In 1963, Bing made a different casting to hold more fuel for the really long curves.

should avoid spraying the Bing CV (or any other) carburetor directly with a water jet. In cold weather, short trips that do not permit thorough warming of all engine components should be avoided. Like the rest of a BMW, the Bing CV carburetor thrives handily on hard work and will perform tirelessly if well treated.

Use genuine BMW parts. STRANGELY, your BMW dealership usually sells carb parts cheaper than Bing USA. With some Airhead carburetors; BMW does not offer just the diaphragm, & wants you to purchase the slide with the diaphragm attached. This may occur with the models where the diaphragm is attached by a pressed-on nylon ring.

There is a difference in main jet according to the bing table between a /149 and /132. Again, I know all of them would work, but for the sake of being as close as possible to the original. I am definitely going to switch the carbs around from the /2 to the R50 and start looking for a carb which number pairs.
