Re: Volvo Penta AQ131-A overheating I always tested my engine in a tub. I just removed the prop and put drive in a tube and added hose and water. Always seemed to prime itself rather quickly. Make sure that there are not any leaks in the water system. Any air leaks will cause trouble with the cooling system.

I'm thinking of buying a 1986 Bayliner capri with a Penta aq131-275 engine. I'm going 8 hours away to check it out and would like to have some info on what to check out. It's my first boat purchase and don't want to buy something that isn't worth the time. The owner said that he hasn't started for a year and that now the starter only clicks.
