PM series Yamaha always seems to be "in your face". That may be why they have been quasi-highly regarded in a live environment. Listen to a PM series channel of any kind in a decent control room, and see if you like the sound. If its something you can work with, $1000 for eight channels ain't bad.

Not sure about the 1800 manual...I did download the PM1000 docs from Yamaha (I'm shocked that it's available) so I'll poke around and see if I can get some specifics. I didn't know if my best approach would just be to start tracing out from around the caps that blew or just start "at the top" and work my way in. As always, your info is helpful ...
